

James R. Gavin III, MD, PhD is clinical professor of medicine at Emory University School of Medicine. He also serves as Chief Medical Officer of Healing Our Village, Inc. He serves as Senior Consultant for Chronic Diseases, Centers for Health Promotion, LLC. He served as President and CEO of the Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta. He also served as senior scientific officer at the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI) and director of the HHMI–NIH Research Scholars Program. Before joining HHMI, he was chief of the Diabetes Section, and William K. Warren Professor for Diabetes Studies at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center. Dr. Gavin is a past president of the American Diabetes Association (ADA), and belongs to many organizations, including the National Academy of Medicine of the National Academies of Sciences, the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists (AACE), the American Society of Clinical Investigation, and the American Association of Physicians. He serves on the board of trustees for Emory University and Livingstone College, is past national program director of the Harold Amos Medical Faculty Development Program of the RWJF (1993-2013), and serves as Board Chairman of the Amos Institute for Medical Faculty Development (AIMFD). He is a trustee emeritus of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. He has received numerous national and international awards and honors. He was named a “Living Legend in Diabetes” by AADE in 2009, received a Lifetime Achievement Award for Diabetes Research from ADA in 2015, and was named Laureate Mentor of the Year by the Endocrine Society in 2021. He has published more than 250 articles and abstracts and three books. He received a BS in Chemistry from Livingstone College, a PhD in Biochemistry from Emory University, and his MD from Duke University.